

THE NEW PARADIGM EDUCATION & ENTERTAINMENT
INTERVIEW WITH CAROLINE CORY

1. Can you first of all please explain the need for a 'New Paradigm' in entertainment and education. What is lacking and why is that a problem?

The current entertainment world has an educational impact on our lives as we get inspired and tend to repeat what we see. We see clear evidence of this fact in young people's violent acts such as school shootings for example as they copy scenes from various movies; we see young girls copying actresses or singers in the way they look or behave; we see reality shows glamorizing and reinforcing our own issues and continuously reflecting the human drama. These experiences are not isolated facts - they seem to be the norm. Clearly, in today's entertainment world, we still find it normal to bare guns and be entertained by serial killings and stories of rape and murder. We find it cool to watch explosions and destruction of buildings, cars and people. We are inspired by devious money schemes because they equate power and glamour.

I also notice that even documentaries and films that bring awareness to important issues such as human trafficking for example, seem to leave a lingering "downer" effect on our being, not an uplifting and inspiring one. The message and intent of the filmmaker may contain a higher vibration but the energy contained within the very concept of human trafficking is extremely low. So that the cognitive part of you is feeling good but the energetic part of you has lowered its vibration. You are one being, cognitive and energetic, so why not create artistic work that combines both an uplifting message and an uplifting vibration?

To me, the issue is not just with the material provided. Because all life forms are energy forms, the issue lies in the laws of energy vibration that transfers naturally between all beings and things, i.e not only between you and another human being but also between you and the film. In other words, everything in existence is energetically interconnected.

The other part of the issue is in the very functioning of the human psyche and the human brain that is trained to observe and repeat what it sees. In my opinion, this is an old paradigm programming that has contributed to the current malfunctions of our society and suffering. The human brain is meant to observe the given data and then make an "evolved" choice that is based on a higher altruistic consciousness that benefits itself and more importantly the collective society. This fundamental flaw in the human brain retrieval and information processing is what led me to create what I call a "New Paradigm in Entertainment and Education." In this new paradigm, we create tools such as images, sounds, and ideas that raise the vibration, trigger the functioning of the full brain capacity and allow the brain to retrieve information in a direct manner from the observed data. For example, you can observe an apple and through this new process, know everything about this object, from its geographical origin to its molecular DNA, without reading a label or having to be told by a third party what to believe. In terms of entertainment, the experience of the images and sounds trigger your own connection to the information, which means you experience the energy of the relatively abstract (by current human standard) information on the screen and find your own truth or make your own discovery about the information. This form of energy transfer between the information and the brain is called vibrational entrainment. The full brain capacity and functioning is what then allows the viewer to become aware of the higher, more evolved choices he has.

I have a vision that this new form of “Experiential Entertainment” will become recognized and appreciated when humanity will get tired or bored of watching itself on the screen. It will want to aspire to new forms of stimulation and creativity and to me this is true evolution, thus a new paradigm, and a total freedom from the old programming. Let’s see what happens.

2. In your article you’re quite explicit about the theory behind the new paradigm and the hardcore science that accompanies it. It’s a fascinating read, but also somewhat abstract. So what about the practical side of your vision? How can and will it be implemented? Can you give some possible applications and how we will benefit from them?

The current human formula goes like this: “I must get educated in order to get a job” equals “I need a job to make money” equals “I have money to pay my bills” equals “I am happy and have succeeded in life.” To me, the real formula goes like this: “I am a divine being in human form with all the creative abilities I need equals I am happy” equals “I can create from a higher consciousness things and services that are in alignment with my true divine nature that will benefit me and the collective consciousness” equals “all my human needs (material or otherwise) are therefore met.”

It is difficult for most people to imagine that all that is required to meet their material and practical needs is to simply be who you really are - another huge topic I discuss in my classes. It is because they are so conditioned by the first formula and they see a society from one generation to the next that is based on those same principles - it becomes quite difficult to conceive of the alternative.

The energetic planetary shifts that have been occurring in the past few years are triggering massive consciousness expansion and the realization that the old belief systems and this human formula do not work. Unemployment on a planetary scale, for example, is bigger than ever before apparently because of governments’ inefficiency and inadequacy but it truly is a co-creation with the collective that no longer believes that employment will bring happiness. Society is, unconsciously, wanting to break away from this old formula-conditioning and create a system that is based on love and higher altruistic values. It just doesn’t know how - mostly because this desire is unconscious. So to me, the answer lies in the individual having the courage to finally admit that the old formula is broken, that it does not lead to happiness. Your human practical needs are all met when you, as a human, begin to believe in your own ability to create in a holistic and evolved manner. So my practical advice is

1. Do anything you can to conquer your fears and to replace those fears with the courage and faith that being who you really are will lead to success and happiness. There are many healing and creative tools available that are free of charge and easily accessible for this purpose. See the link below.

2. Without forcing your current lifestyle into change, address your current belief system, and change it accordingly. Simply say: "I ask and intend to delete this belief system about ... that I have unconsciously inherited from the human collective consciousness from my conscious, subconscious and cellular memory. I now choose to replace it with my own belief system that is ... (state your own belief about the subject)." This simple exercise will do wonders if you just allow it. If you wish to go deeper into this work, you can also refer to the creative formula and cellular reprogramming tools that I have provided. Many are available free of charge.

3. Use the tools provided to switch to full brain capacity and apply them to your daily life as much as possible. For example: after doing the full-brain exercise, retrieve the information from a product without reading the label, then compare your findings with what is written. Practice on everything you encounter during the day, from the cereal box to the latest scientific discovery, and you will gradually understand the difference. Of course, these guided exercises are explained in more detail and practiced during the workshops and classes we offer.

4. Finally, imagine that you are the last living soul on Earth and that your mission is to leave something meaningful behind. What will you leave behind? Whatever your answer is should be what to focus on creating now, for yourself and others. Have fun with this one!

Once your belief system is aligned with who you really are and the new formula, the new paradigm educational system that allows you to retrieve information experientially through entrainment is facilitated and becomes easily implemented.

3. At the end of the article you try to stimulate the reader in realizing his or her own 'ideas' and 'projects' based on the new paradigm. Can you give our readers some suggestions and/or examples?

I explained in the previous question the first steps to take to begin functioning at a higher level, including creativity. From there, you must understand that as you come into the human form, you abide by the human brain and collective functioning. In other words, as a human, you belong to a pool of information already existing on Earth, either in manifested form or as a potential. Each time you have a "new" idea, you are actually and typically drawing from a potential idea already existing in this collective pool. By implementing this idea, you are simply manifesting its potential in material form. For example, the person who created the QR code did not create a new system of storing information, which is not "new" since code storing already exists. He created storing information into a code that is relevant to web addresses etc. This form of creating is certainly helpful and can have some practical applications. However, the human has the ability to bring in new concepts and ideas that do not currently exist in this collective pool. These ideas and thought forms revolutionize the human thinking and contribute greatly to its evolution. One example would be: "Creating a new form of renewable energy that is free and accessible to all at once." Or how about: "Retrieving information through vibrational entrainment!" These seem like huge concepts, only because we are so used to thinking small. In fact, new ideas in all areas such as engineering, gardening, child bearing, artistic expressions even food consumption are needed to be created from this higher level now.

I cannot explain the entire process of this form of higher creativity and how to bypass the collective pool within the scope of this short article but more importantly, it is because the process has to be understood experientially. As I mentioned, my method of (New Paradigm) teaching is experiential, which means that you get to understand things by tapping into their consciousness and you get to know how to do things, by doing them yourself and finding your own answers. That is why I am facilitating “The New Paradigm Creativity Workshop” in Holland and in various locations and online on subsequent dates – to go deeper into this concept and explore these abilities.

4. Please explain how your new paradigm will be a tool in transforming human consciousness and how this tool relates to other subjects of your work, e.g. 2012, the innovation of the earth's magnetic forcefield and the upgrading of our DNA.

All you have to do is imagine a society that relies on its own divine nature to create life and even material things on Earth. If each one of us begins to operate based on the altruistic formula I have postulated above, the individual will gradually free him/herself from disease, from the fears of the collective conditioning and pre-established belief systems, from the need to go through another person to learn things or even more importantly to connect with Source / Creator / God / The Universal Mind. This new human will be activating and supporting its own new DNA potential, which in turn supports the creation of an evolved life on Earth. As you know, the individual makes the collective and in all the various areas we found ourselves focusing on. So it all begins with each one of us, now.

5. The science you are referring to is about influencing the subconsciousness of human beings. Isn't this something that is already widely in use for commercial and propagandistic reasons? So what are the possibly dangerous side-effects of your proposition and how can we eliminate them?

I appreciate your question because it offers me an opportunity to clarify the details of the process. In the recent years particularly, many individuals such as whistle blowers have exposed the serious detrimental negative effects of various commercial, social, administrative systems and now humanity is traumatized! It is so traumatized that it can no longer trust.

The process I speak of “Vibrational Entrainment” or even simple resonance is a naturally occurring phenomenon. This means that any two given energy forms, even objects, interact and exchange energy due to their very nature (energy has an inherent vibration and gives off that vibration to anything it comes in contact with). This is a scientific fact. The problem is humans cannot see this energy exchange between things and therefore, do not think of it as real or simply ignore its existence. For example, we hear the sound coming from the radio into our ears but we do not see the sound waves traveling from the radio station to our ears and yet these waves do exist. So there is an energy exchange happening organically but its effect depends on your own individual human process. Let me explain with a simple example: When your mother cooks a good meal for you or offers you a cookie, an invisible energy of love (in the shape of a thought form) has been transferred between your mother and yourself through the cookie. That is the organic energy transfer part. However, you have now associated this food intake, particularly the cookie, through your own cognitive ability, with the love of your mother. You have now created a new belief system according to your positive experience and accepted the fact in a way that food equals love - and that has nothing to do with the organic energy transfer between your mother-the cookie and you. This new belief is now part of your new cellular makeup (yes, the DNA gets altered that way) and from that point on, all your actions and all your thoughts will include this new information (food equals love). Can you really blame your mother or the cookie? Or will you simply recognize that even your positive experience led you to create a new belief system, unconsciously. This means that the energy transfer is one thing and what you do with it is another.

I believe humanity has been greatly wounded, taken advantage of and even interfered with the last few hundred years but as a species, over thousands of years. So I understand its deep trauma and the healing process that must take place regarding subconscious manipulation. However, I also believe it is time for the individual to reclaim his/her own ability to think, trust his/her own guidance and ability to create his/her own reality, beliefs and truth. Now that we know there is an energetic transfer that happens between all things, even positive ones, all you have to do is create your belief system accordingly. This new belief system can be something like: "Nothing of this experience will register into my cells without my own free will. My free will is to allow only those vibrations that are aligned with my higher consciousness, that allow me to see the truth for myself..." Something along these lines and you will have nothing to fear because you create according to your beliefs, not someone else's work.

6. What can people do right here and now to increase their own frequency, creativity and usage of their brain capacity?

1. Understand and acknowledge that you have one human aspect but have a universal heritage and DNA. Therefore you must connect with the source of all life at the universal core. Do the 7mn "Connecting to Source" exercise every day and as needed. It is available in Dutch and English free of charge on our website. This will automatically activate your higher vibration instantly and switch to full brain capacity and functioning. Here is the link CONNECTING TO SOURCE

2. Believe in yourself, change your new belief systems on all areas of your life, now. Use the short exercise described above. This exercise seems simple but is quite powerful - as you transform your own beliefs you raise your vibration. For example: "I ask and intend to delete my fear about not having a job from my conscious, subconscious and cellular memory... I choose to replace it with a new belief, which is "I do not need to have a job to attract abundance or..." Create your own, using your own words.

3. Release negative emotions as you become aware of them. Again, you can use the exercise outlines above. Simply replace the belief with the emotion.

4. Try the new tools provided: there are some healing videos available free of charge. Set your intent and explore what happens. Here is the link HEALING VIDEOS

5. Take responsibility for your own creation. Act as a true divine being in human form. The tools are there, the support system is there. There are no more excuses and no time to waste.

7. Anything you like to add...

Society believes that we must solve our current issues by providing services and products that support our current issues i.e that are popular or easily understood by the average person in order to be effective. To me, I feel that we must remedy the root cause of the malfunctions of society as a whole, and that is transform its very consciousness / brain functioning (no easy task!), not just improve what currently is. For this, we must, from time to time, have the courage to introduce new concepts and ideas that transform the human spirit and take it to a new level whether these new concepts are fully understood, whether they make immediate sense to the common man at the moment or not. Or else, how will we ever conceive of such alternatives or potential in the collective pool of human consciousness?

Final comment: All my work on healing, teaching, creating is based on my own direct experience with the Divine. I never had a spiritual teacher in human form. I learned all I know through direct experience and saw the practical value, the truth and validation in consciousness expansion, human wellbeing and personal freedom using only my own experience and tools. My wish is that others will also experience their own divinity and truth in this free and direct manner, through experiential learning and contribute to a new society based on love and altruistic principles.
